

To mark Holocaust Memorial Day 2015, the Jewish Historical Society of Ireland presents a talk by

YANKY FACHLER

Why did the RAF continue to pay royalties to I G Farben,
the manufacturer of Zyklon B, right through WW2?

In this talk, writer and historian Yanky Fachler reveals that during WW2, some of the largest US corporations were more concerned with protecting their patent agreements with German companies than with pursuing the war effort. Harry Truman and others described this policy of "business as usual" as tantamount to treason.
